Although China may only have been reacting Wednesday to recent British calls for open-ended talks, its public declaration of a deadline, implied but never formally stated before, is likely to change the na-ture of the Chinese-British negotiations here on Hong Kong's future, according to Western diplomats. "China first announced that its recovery of sovereignty was non-negotiable," a West European am-bassador observed. "Next, it said that its administration of the territory after recovering sovereignty was non-negotiable. Now it is say-ing that the basic terms are nonnegotiable - either the British accept the Chinese terms by next September or China will try to impose them." Britain has all but conceded sovereignty over Hong Kong to China, ctv because what would remain after the lease expired would not be viable politically or economically.

Over the past year, Britain has been trying to negotiate with China an agreement guaranteeing the col-ony's 5.5 million people, 98 percent tended transition from British rule

But Britain's bargaining position is weak, resting largely on the de-sire of most Hong Kong residents for a continuation of the colony's present status.

China clearly has the upper hand. It supplies virtually all Hong Kong's food, most of its water, many of its raw materials, and all could be cut off at an hour's notice. Beijing controls most trade unions three leading newspapers, a net-work of banks, department stores and trading companies. "For 30 years, Hong Kong has existed on China's sufferance, and Beijing seems to be reminding London of that rather forcefully," said a prominent Hong Kong business-man. "This may be just a Chinese negotiating ploy, a very strong one, but it has to be taken seriously."

What provoked the Chinese declaration is unclear. Western diplomats pointed to a recent British parliamentary debate during which Foreign Office minister said the talks with China would not be

TRIPOLI, Lebanon - Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, vowed to fight on until victory Wednesday, as his supporters beat back a three pronged attack by Syrian-backed rebels on their last stronghold in the Tripoli area of northern Leba-

The anti-Arafat dissidents, aided by rocket and artillery fire from Syrian batteries, tried to dislodge the Arafat loyalists from their base in the Badawi refugee camp and force them to flee into Tripoli.

The offensive, launched at dawn from rebel-controlled hills around the camp, appeared to have failed, however, as reporters who entered the Badawi camp shortly before nightfall found the Arafat loyalists still in total control.

[A spokesman for Mr. Arafat's forces said late Wednesday that a cease-fire had been agreed, but he said the fighters were skeptical about the chances of the truce holding, The Associated Press reported. [The spokesman said shelling by dissidents diminished "significantly" after the agreement but that Arafat strongholds in the Badawi refugee camp and in the port were still being hit. "We pray this is serious, but we are very skeptical, the spokesman said.]

On Wednesday, the bombardment of the refugee camp, Mr. Arafat's last base, spilled over into the nearby Tripoli port and oil refin-ery, setting ablaze oil storage tanks that once held a million barrels of oil. The ensuing fire sent out a huge cloud of smoke that obscured Tripoli from view for most of the morn-

"I was in Beirot during the Israeli attacks for 88 days," said Mr. Arafat's senior military commander, Khalil al-Wazir, also known as Aba Jihad, "but I have not seen this kind of war. The Syrian shelling of Badawi, which is only half of one square kilometer, is worse than the Israeli shelling of Beirut, which was five square kilometers."

According to Reto Meister, the resentative in Tripoli, 532 people, both civilians and fighters, were recorded as injured as of Taesday morning. He said another 150 to 200 were estimated to have been killed up to that point.

However, be said, the figures were incomplete and did not include many people in rebel-controlled villages.

camps in the last seven days of battles, with little apparent concern for the thousands of civilians trapped in the cinderblock homes and shelters inside.

As many as 20 percent of Tripoli's 600,000 inhabitants may have fled during the fighting, according to Mr. Meister. Reagan Warns Nakasone on Trade Differences

TOKYO - President Ronald Reagan bluntly told Prime Minis-ter Yasuhiro Nakasone on Wednesday that, unless U.S.-Japanese trade differences are resolved, relations between the two allies could be seriously affected.

Jordan-Israel Contacts May Be Helped by PLO Crisis, U.S. Officials Say

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON --- Reagan administration officials have said that the rebellion in the Palestine Liberation Organization could provide a new opportunity to bring King Hussein of Jordan and West Bank Palestinians into negotiations with

The officials said Tuesday that Yasser Arafat, the PLO chairman who is surrounded by Syrianbacked PLO rebels in the Lebanese port of Tripoli, was likely, if he survived, to be forced to return to Tunis or some other place far from the West Bank of the Jordan.

If that happens, the officials said, it will raise the question of who is authorized to speak for the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, which Israel has controlled since 1967.

They said that it was already evident to many Middle Eastern leaders that Mr. Arafat and his PLO supporters were no longer the unquestioned representatives of the Palestinian people. There is likely to be a long and bitter Arah dehate about who should speak for the Palestinians, one official said. But Mr. Arafat's supporters on the West Bank are expected to re-sist coming under Syrian sway.

United Press International HAMBURG, West Germany-

Israel's defense minister, Moshe Arens, has said that a Shiite Moslem terrorist group backed by Syria was responsible for bombing attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in April and on U.S. and French peacekeeping forces on

"We have no doubt," Mr. Arens said in an interview with the West German magazine Stern that was published Wednesday. "It could be no one else in the area. That was a complex and relatively demanding operation, which no small group in Lebanon could carry out without at least the belp of Syria."

President Ronald Reagan, outlining a U.S. Middle East initiative on Sept. 1, 1982, invited King Hussein and local Palestinians to join Egyptian-Israeli talks on Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Mr. Reagan said the United States would support some kind of association between the West Bank and Jordan.

Hussein made his participation in the talks conditional on PLO backing, which Mr. Arafat, after protracted negotiations with the king, did not give him. In 1974, the Arab League mandated the PLO. which is not recognized by either Israel or the United States, to carry on all negotiations for recovery of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

With the PLO in disarray, some U.S. officials said, Hussein may review his position. One administration official said, "It could well be - this is just a hypothesis - hut the West Bank Palestinians may feel that with Arafat no longer in charge, and the PLO at each other's throats, that they ought to strike the best deal they can, and they might ask Hussein to help them."

Hussein has been cautious in his public statements. In an interview in an Amman newspaper last weekend, be said Syria was trying to divide the Arab world and complicate the situation in Lebanon and

"The door to Palestinian-Jordanian negotiations remains open. he said, but added that the situation was now more complicated. He said Jordan would not reassess its position until it saw the result of the talks in Geneva among rival Lebanese factions and how the conflict in the PLO was resolved. He said that if Arab leaders met for their scheduled summit in Saudi Arabia soon, their decisions could also affect Jordan's position.

U.S. officials said they had urged Israel, in talks to establish closer strategie cooperation, to be more supportive of Jordan, which is following an anti-Syrian policy. In particular, the United States would like Israel to support U.S. efforts to supply Jordan with the equipment for a strike force to help Gulf na-

U.S. and Soviet Resume Geneva Talks: New U.S. Offer Is Reportedly Planned

GENEVA — U.S. and Soviet officials resumed talks Wednesday on limiting European-hased medium-range nuclear missiles, amid reports that the United States was planning to make a last-minute offer before its deployment of new missiles next month.

CAIRO (UPI) — David Kimche, director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, met Wednesday with Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs, Butros Ghali, to discuss their strained bilateral relations, an Israeli Embassy spokesman said.

The spokesman said Mr. Kimche will meet members of parliament later in the day and might hold talks with Foreign Minister Kamal-Hassan Ali. An Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman in Jerusalem said Wednesday that Mr. Kimche's visit was meant "to activate constructive dialogue" and that "all subjects will be put on the table."

Mr. Kimche's two-day trip is the second visit of a high-level Israeli official since Israeli invaded Lebanon in June 1982. Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai traveled to Cairo two months ago. Israel and Egypt signed a peace treaty in 1979 and exchanged ambassadors. But Egypt withdrew its ambassador a year ago after Palestinian refugees were massacred in refugee camps in Lebanon that were under Israeli control. Egypt has delayed returning an ambassador to Israel until Tel Aviv annoutimetable for withdrawing its troops from Lebanon.

Syria mobilized its reservists on Monday, apparently fearing a U.S. retaliatory strike over the bombing Oct. 23 at U.S. marine headquarters in Beirut. Newspapers said that officials had considered postponing or canceling its drill over fears Syria might misinterpret its aim, but that they decided to go ahead because Damascus might view a cancellation as a

Israel Closes 2 Schools After Stoning TEL AVIV (NYT) - The military government in the Israeli-occupied

NEW YORK (AP) - Edwin Wilson, the former U.S. intelligence agent who was imprisoned for selling weapons to Libya, was sentenced Wednesday to 25 years more for trying to murder two federal prosecutors, a business associate and five government witnesses.

Mr. Wilson, who formerly worked for the Central Intelligence Agency, has been serving a 17-year term for selling 20 tons of explosives to Libya. He was also fined $75,000. The prison term stems from an attempt to kill prosecutors and

Before the sentencing, Mr. Wilson's lawyer, Michael Dowd, said his client had been shaped by 20 years as a government agent. time for those of us who adopted a questionasking attitude during the intervention to move toward a more settled view. That attitude, to be sure, was not exactly neutral. It was skeptical. Just to ask whether it was a necessary, justified or effective intervention was to challenge the administration's assertions, or at least to pronounce them insufficient and in need of more proof. We did not and do not accept much of the left's and Latin America's categorical opposition to all interventions (especially U.S. interventions). But for us there were big questions about this one.

Let us try to tote up the answers on the basis of what is known now:

Before the event, the detained Grenadian governor general, sole repository of what legrimate authority remained on the island, did request outside help, and half a dozen eastern Caribbean states, acting through a legitimate treaty process, did request U.S. aid.

After the event, unequivocal endorsements of the invasion came from three groups with, in their fashion, impressive credentials: most of toe American students, most Grenadian citizens and most states of the eastern Caribbean. And -- although this bears more on the politics than the merits of the act - most American citizens also supported it.

As to the first of President Reagan's stated reasons for the invasion, preventing harm to the students, one can say that it was better to be safe than sorry. Of the second, one can say that the narrow mission of bringing law and

As Grenada drifts off the froot page, it is order was accomplished but the harder mission of establishing a democratic society lies ahead. In its nine independent years, Grenada has had two leaders, an anti-democratic crackpot of the right and an anti-democratic Marxist of the left. Watch out.

It was troublesome and a bad precedent for Mr. Reagan to yield so much authority over the actual operation to the uniformed military, which created an unnecessary crisis of political confidence by barring the press and by too often seeming blind to the operation's diplomatic context. The importance of speedily transferring any residual military and police functions to other parties, for instance, does not yet appear to be fully understood. As for the president's larger strategic purposes, certainly he blocked whatever the resident Cubans, Russians, East Germans and North Koreans - hardly disinterested parties - were planning to do on and with Grenada. Whether he could have blocked them better by timely diplomacy is, unfortunately, moot. We think President Reagan made the right decision in Grenada. He redeemed a truly disturbing situation with an economical use of force, though he will have to pay a certain price in confidence lost and image besmirched. It is telling, however, that many people still fear the president will pocket what favor comes his way and use it to vindicate the general use of force to resolve sticky foreign policy problems. If he does, everything he hoped to have gained in Grenada will be washed out.

Reagan's Deficit Gamble

President Reagan's adamant denunciations of any tax increase will guarantee, if he per-sists, buge deficits at least until 1986. He has now taken a public pledge to veto any tax increase. The U.S. economy is currently expanding for the very good reason that the Reagan administration is spending $200 billion a year more than its revenues. The president is betting on a classic Keynesian recovery - beavy deficit spending by the government, generating higher spending by consumers - to get him through the election.

It may well work. Unemployment is coming down unexpectedly fast.

Then again, it may not work. The threats are, as always, inflation and the interest rates, The inflation rate is likely to pick up, not dramatically, but noticeably, in coming months. At their present levels the interest rates create a degree of vulnerability in the economy by putting severe strain on the financial structures of companies and governments, in the United States and abroad

The risks do not seem to bother Mr. Reagan. But there is a broad hipartisan majority of Congress that considers them much too dangerous. The leadership there is coming from two Republican senators, Robert Dole, the chairman of the Finance Committee, and Pete Domenici, who heads the Budget Committee. The Democrats are less explicit. They do oot see wby they should do anything as unpleasant as pushing a tax increase if they are only going to be attacked for it by the White House. Meanwhile, Mr. Reagan responds to all questions about the deficit by blaming Congress for failing to reduce spending. That is disingenuous. He has run out of both ideas and enthusiasm for further large spending cuts, as his budget last January demonstrated

To suggestions of raising taxes, be replies by admonishing Congress to "keep their hands off the recovery." That is the standard Keynesian position — that raising taxes will curtail growth. But it is not necessarily true. In the ate spring of 1982, a sudden dismaying slide into deeper recession induced Mr. Reagan to change his mind and support that year's tax increase. The first effect was a sharp drop in interest rates from July through September 1982, and the second was the beginning of an economic recovery in December. Similarly a tax increase enacted now, to be imposed in stages over several years, would not jeopardize the recovery but preserve and extend it. The initiative will have to come from Mr. Reagan. If he were to move, he could probably persuade Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill to help It is not probable that it will happen. But with presidential leadership it is possible, and it would strengthen the economic prospects for the United States and many other countries. both before and after the election.

Reagan & Co.: Public Relations Pros

WASHINGTON — Reagan & Co. is the best public relations outfit this city has seen in years, and as the presidential election approaches, everybody is analyzing bow they do it. Examples abound

In the flap over bow the administration handled or manhandled reporters during the Grenada invasion, they managed to persuade a lot of people that they had to choose between the security of the troops and the freedom of the press. They chose security; it was a popular decision.

Obviously, they could not invite everyone in the news media on the first ride into Grenada. This would have involved almost as many reporters as Cubans on the island. It would have been a disaster.

There was, of course, another way to avoid the dilemma, which is used all the time. For example, when the president flew off to Japan and South Korea Tuesday, be did not ask the whole news corps to the party, but only two or three reporters and photographers to rep-resent the press and the people.

This is familiar to the administration, and accepted by news organizations, as the "pool system," under which a few reporters are permitted to observe the facts, and then pass on or "pool" their notes and film to their colleagues.

It is a sensible compromise between security and freedom, used by General Eisenhower during the invasion of Normandy, and by ev-ery other president and theater commander since then in the Korean and Vietnam Wars. This illustrates Public Relations

Lesson No. 1, which is Dominate time of trouble. If some misguided the Question, Emphasize the popular and avoid the unpopular: securi-ty of the troops, which everybody wants, rather than press freedom, which not everyone does.

Also, get the key words straight: "Invasion" is not a kindly word; "rescue mission" sounds better. Public Relations Lesson No. 2, invented by the first Roosevelt and perfected by the second, was: Dominate and Manage the News. If you don't, somebody else will.

Teddy Roosevelt saw the White House as a "bully pulpit," and attributed some of his P.R. success to his "discovery" of Monday. That is to say, be found that he could get on the front pages of the Monday morning newspapers because re-porters were off duty on the weekend and editors had to fill space. Franklin Roosevelt used the Sunday evening fireside chat to reach the people, before the days of televised professional football games, in the hope that his listeners would be in a thoughtful mood.

Mr. Reagan has employed these techniques and has added two others. He works hard on his Saturday noon radio broadcasts, aiming to attract the attention of the big-circulation Sunday papers. These have not been a great success. But, more important, Mr. Reagan has mastered the art of the television camera in ways that arouse the envy of Hollywood and Madison Avenue - and infuriate the Democrats.

He is also lucky. He has a genrus for being somewhere else at the idiot sets off a bomb in the Capitol of the United States, precisely when things are really getting serious in the Middle East, it is precisely at that moment when Mr. Reagan just happens to be flying off to Asia.

As President Carter said of his old buddy Bert Lance when Bert was in financial travelle were here.

was in financial trouble, you have to give him credit. Mr. Carter was blamed for everything because be paid attention to everything. Mr. Reagan has a way of not being blamed for anything for the oppo-site reason. Everything that goes wrong is blamed on Judge Clark, or James Watt, or Caspar Weinberger, or on Congress.

This is a remarkable achievement. Mr. Reagan is an appealing figure, presiding with the atmost sincerity over the memorial services for the marines killed in Lebanou, so good at it in fact that he makes you forget why the marines were so exposed in Beirut, and who was to blame, and why they were there.

There is, however, one question. Will it work? And maybe a couple of others: Is there a policy back of all this, a clear mind with clear intentions? Or is it mainly a triumph of short-run public relations? This is what we would like to know after the victory in Grenada and before the coming crisis in the alliance and with the Russians over the emplacement of cruise and Per-shing-2 missiles in Europe. The trouble with public relations is that without a product that really serves the public, it leaves a drop of poison. It helps politicians, but, no matter how successful, it can defeat them if they rely on it too much. The New York Times.

Why Andropov Has Failed To Change Russia's Face

PRINCETON, New Jersey — A little-understood features of Soviet full year has passed since Yuri politics.

Andropov succeeded Leonid Brezheven been seen for months.

of Mr. Brezhnev's last years, Mr. Andropov would become a strongman, changing Soviet domestic or foreign policy significantly. Some initial developments under Mr. Andropov nerving memories of Stalin's caprithe United States and toward a resoution of the Afghan war; a surge of reformist rhetoric in the central press; and highly publicized cam-paigns to fight corruption, restore "labor discipline," and increase the authority of plant managers.

But little has changed, certainly far less than during the first year of Nikita Khrushchev's or Leonid Brezhnev's leadership. Mr. Andropov's three domestic campaigns seem to be petering out. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union remains mired in Afghanistan, deadlocked in talks with the Chinese, and embroiled in a worsening confrontation with the United States.

Nor has Mr. Andropov become a strongman, even though in June he finally acquired the ceremonial presidency, and he has reduced the power of his chief rival, Konstantin Chernenko. Despite several vacancies, only one voting member has been added to the Politburo. Its composition remains Mr. Brezhnev's, not Mr. Andropov's. Despite changes among the hundreds of top bosses who actually run the Soviet system, from Moscow ministers to regional party secretaries, the overwhelming majority remain Brezhnev men, aged symbols of complacent leadership.

Moreover, Mr. Andropov, who sought to contrast himself to the long-enfeebled Mr. Brezhnev by being a visibly active leader, has virtually disappeared from public life since the South Korean airliner incident Sept 1. His poor health is hardly an explanation. Confronted with foreign policy disasters of that magnitude, ailing leaders of great states manage at least token appearances to reaffirm their authority—and especially at an occasion as important as Monday's commemoration of the Bolshevik Revolution. As a result, there is already gossip in Moscow about a sucion to Mr. Andropov himself.

Unlike the case with his predecessors, there is no Andropov's Russia, and growing signs are that there will be none. The reasons involve three nev as leader of the Soviet Union, but the Communist Party, the top leaderthe "Andropov Era" has yet to un- ship position, is not so inherently fold; indeed, the Soviet leader has not powerful that its occupant automatically becomes a personal dictator. It Most Western commentators pre- took Mr. Andropov's predecessors as dicted that after the weak leadership general secretary five years or more to achieve supremacy in the leadership. Moreover, each general secreperhaps even ruling through the tary since Stalin has had less personal KGB (which he headed for 15 years), power than his predecessor.

seemed to support the expectation: cious terror and Nikita Kirushchev's new high-level appointments; more incessant reorganizations, other parenergetic overtures toward China and ty, state and military bosses opposed the emergence of another strong lead-er. Mr. Brezhnev acquiesced to that sentiment, basing his 18-year reign on conservative policies that guaranteed the tenure of those officials.

Mr. Andropov, therefore, is constrained not simply by the swollen power of the Soviet military, as Sovietologists in Washington now speculate, but by a more general diffusion of power throughout the hu-reaucratic system. As the oldest (he is now 69) and frailest man ever to hold the post, it is unlikely Mr. Andropov can revitalize it. The second constraint on the leader's power is longstanding policy di-visions in the Soviet political class. Despite widely acknowledged economic problems, for example, Soviet officials are deeply divided between those who believe in muddling through, those who want to restore more draconian Stalinist measures, and those who urge decentralizing reforms. The result has been decades of policy immobility. Nor is there consensus about international affairs. On the central question of Soviet-American relations, Soviet officials are bitterly split between advocates of Cold War and propo-nents of detente. The result has been decades of ecratic policy.

Finally, Mr. Andropov's first year has been one of relentless confrontations and crises abroad, from Poland and Afghanistan to Mr. Reagan's anti-Soviet crusade, Lebanon, Central America, and now the Caribbean. None of these was directly of Mr. Andropov's making, but their result has been to redouble every Soviet obstacle to internal change, as inter-national tensions do. Thus, while American hard-liners insist that the Cold War is necessary because the Soviet system will not change, Soviet policies make such changes almost Everything we know about Mr. Andropov suggests that he is both reform-minded and exceedingly cautions, so he may still put his imprint on the Soviet system. More likely, however, he is to be a transitional leader. Indeed, the most significant change of his first year is the emergence of a new inner leadership group in charge of government and eco-nomic affairs. Composed of Grigori Romanov, Geydar Aliyev, Nikolai Ryzhkov, Vladimir Dolgikh, and Mikhail Gorbachev (currently Mr. Andropov's most likely successor), the average age of its members is about 58, a full political generation younger that that of Mr. Brezhnev

Many Western analysts now argue that the impending succession of this new generation of officials throughout the Soviet system will make a major difference. But that generation also is deeply divided between friends and foes of change. And it, too, will inherit a Soviet Union that increasingly resembles more the lum-bering bureaucratic Russia of weak czars than the dynamic leader-domi-nated "totalitarianism" of Stalin or of Orwell's "1984."

Reprisals in Lebanon?

If the Syrians and their irregular partners do pose a challenge by further attacks on U.S. Marines, the American response should be considered, surgical and swift. It should be proportionate - and thus limited - in the sense that its purpose is to maintain the exist-ing limited force levels in Lebanon, not to seek a wider commitment. Nobody should be in any doubt that the stakes can become very high in such a confrontation. But it would be quite wrong for the United States either to abandon its limited position or to expand it.

A New Strategic Agreement Between U.S. and Israel?

WASHINGTON — Not many hours after the bombing of the U.S. Marine compound in Beirut. Henry Kissinger was on television arguing that only by beefing up the balance of power on the American side could the United States bope to negotiate a Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon. He had in mind Israel. "It is an amazing phenomenon that the Israeli Army is sitting 20 kilometers from where Americans are being killed and that there seems to be no coordination between our policies at all," he declared. He had a point, considering the uncharacteristic ambivalence in the Reagan administration's recent relations with Israel. And it probably is not too much to say that Mr. Kissinger also had a purpose: to throw his considerable weight publicly on the side of the argument, then reging within the administration, over whether the United States should not set aside its concern for Arab sensitivities and plunge into an elaborate (and expensive) military and strategic "understanding" with Israei.

High hopes on both sides for just such an arrangement were dashed two years ago when the Israelis of-fended the Reagan administration by their de facto annexation of the Golan Heights. But this "understanding" is now being put together again, reliable sources say, as a key element in what is essentially a State Department strategy for resolving the im-passe over Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon and thereby making possi-ble the extraction of the U.S. Marines and presumably the rest of the multinational force. The struggle within the administra-tion has had Secretary of State George Shuitz on one side, arguing for a much more visible U.S. Israeli onstration of common purpose. On the other side have been Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arguing that high-profile security links between the United States and Israel undermine relations with Arab nations vital to U.S. interests - Saudi Arabia, to start with, mut also Egypt, Jordan and some other Gulf states dersecretary of state, to Israel, His mission was to strike a bargain with Israel. Some parts of it are likely to be known soon; others are unlikely ever to be acknowledged officially.

The U.S. offer to the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir begins with a new memorandum of understanding. As with the 1981 version, it would provide U.S. financing for purchases from Israel's own dofense industry, not only by the United States and the Israeli government but by other foreign buyers. The United States would lift restrictions on the type of assistance it would give for the development of the Israelidesigned Lavi fighter plane. The United States would also be more generous about sharing its military technology with Israel. "If they know the name of it, they will get it," said one knowledgeable official.

That Mr. Shultz apparently has prevailed is suggested by the visit of Lawrence Eagleburger, the U.S. unpublication of U.S. military supplies and equipment in Israel for U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces designed to come to the rescue of friendly countries in the Arab world, and more specifically to defend the Gulf's oil resources.

All U.S. military assistance would be in the form of direct grants. Under the current arrangement, part of the $1.7 billion in annual military aid is in the form of credits. In return, Israel would be asked mainly to stop doing things that work against constructive U.S. relations with Arab states. For example, Israel has vigorously opposed what was supposed to be a secret $220-million U.S. financing of a Jordanian Rapid Deployment Force.

Finally, the United States is said to be asking the Israelis to adopt what one official describes as a "more humane" policy on the West Bank, But this reportedly would not require the Israelis to give in to President Rea-Plans will also be revived for the Bank settlements.

This may not be all that Henry Kissinger had in mind when he talked about changing the balance of power in Lebanon. But it does meet the Kissinger requirement for more visi-ble U.S.-Israeli solidarity before any Syrian conciliation.

In policy-making circles, the Shultz approach is known as the "Rodman" plan. That refers to Peter W. Rodman of the State Department Policy Planning Staff — the same Mr. Rodman who is described in Mr. Kissinger's memoirs as a member of "my usual team of Mideast aides."

What we are witnessing is a return to a Reagan first principle, set forth in his 1980 presidential campaign. He spoke ringingly of an "iron-clad bond between Israel and the United States" as a "moral imperative." Isra-el, he said, "is a major strategic asset to America."

The Washington Post.

Conventional Wisdom on Mideast Is Looking Less Wise

R OME — America's new Middle East negotiator, Donald Rumsfeld, is yet another beginner who will have to find his way through the world's most intricately patterned minefield. His newness is a handicap in an area of short fuses and long memories. Yet he can turn fresh eyes to advantage. This is a time when it is useful to question all going assumptions. U.S. policy has broken down, mired in old slogans; everything else is shifting. Conventional wisdom has become mreliable, including the expectation that nothing much can happen in a presidential election year. On the contrary, the United States is now seen as particularly vulnerable to pressure and eager for apparent successes in this period. The United States is talking about retaliation for the attack on the Marines in Beirut. Italy has delivered the message that if U.S. policy in Leba-

The adage that the Palestinian issue is the crux of the conflict is not necessarily true. Yasser Arafat is being strangled by his tightrope; the rest of the Arabs no longer care much about Palestinian aspirations. Some kind of Palestine Liberation Organization doubtless will survive, but only under Syrian control.

Mr. Arafat is still popular on the West Bank, but be risks the double brand of traitor and loser. Time and Israeli determination have trans-formed the West Bank's fate. Palestinian Arabs see no way to a settlement with Israel; they see Israeli penetration of their land as nearly mextreable.

The issue is no longer about the fate of the Palestinians but about the kind of Jewish state their repressed existence will help mold. Despite rejectionist cliches, Israel's permanence is acknowledged throughout the region. The new Arab problem is how to relate to it; as another bellicose tribe, or as a gallingly successful rival.

One is nationalism. That current can accommodate the troubling issue of minorities such as Copts in Egypt, Maromites in Lebanon, various Arab sects and so on. But it produces the state rivairies that racked Europe for so many centuries. And no single state can dominate and impose order. Another is Arabism. But the coucept of a great Arab nation, of soli-darity, keeps breaking down in the face of profoundly felt differences. It thrives only in hostility to outside enemies, and has proven incapable of mobilizing energies to deal with ur-gent economic and social problems. The third is religion, Islam It is the most emotionally satisfying and seems best able to express the deep rage of frustration that subsiscopes with the modern world by sweeping rejection.

Ideology has subsided as an agent for change. All the classic elements of the Macoist class dialectic are pre-sent, but they are overwhelmed by the three major forces. Violence seems inescapable, not only because of tradition but because the lack of well-rooted institutions beyond the scale of the village or the bazzar provides no other effective tool of organization. Authority over the larger society that contemporary production requires and communications create is left to rest on force. Israel, too, is being transformed. It has gained tremendous new confi-dence in its might but has lost selfassurance in its meaning. It also has a problem of fundamentalism. It is torn between the old ideals of creating healthy, moral normalcy, and a new sense of mannest desirny.

The most recent such report quoted a senior government official in Baghdad as saying that only an attack on Kharg Island could bring about negotiations. According to Reuters, the official, who was not identified, said the continued operations of the terminal "feed their war machinery" and encourage Iran to "mount new attacks on Iraqi border areas.

If Iraq is reluctant to commit its new fighter-bombers to action so soon after their arrival, it has enough Soviet-built Scud-R surface-to-surface missiles to do the job, according to military analysts here. Leftists in Nicaragua, Rightists in El Salvador Attack Catholic Church

By Joanne Omang Vashington Post Service

SAN SALVADOR - The Roman Catholic Church once again is the focus of political tensions in Central America, under attack from both the right and the left. and increasingly its leaders are speaking out in similar terms gainst both sides.

Church officials here now talk openly of "a systematic campaign" by the right against two hishops' frequent denunciations of four years of violence and human rights abuses during the Salvadoran civil war. Although the bishops have taken care to deplore both leftist and collective military defense guerrilla terrorists and rightist Mr. Bishara lauded the Security death squads, it is the rightists who have recently threatened to retaliate with violence.

"It seems to be coming from peoole who would like to set up a dictatorship of the right in our country," said Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, the auxiliary bishop of El Salvador, in his homily during a Mass on Monday, "There are those who see in this the beginning of a systematic campaign against the church."

The rightist Maximiliano Hernández Brigade threatened Monsignor Rosa Chavez and Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas with death last week. Monsignor Rosa Chávez's father was subsequently arrested for one day in what the auxiliary bishop said be hoped was a mistake.

We're still waiting for an official explanation" for the arrest, he said after the Mass.

gy with which he is not in agreement." The Sandinists have pro-tested that the church is telling young Nicaraguans to resist the draft, and the reaction has been physical as well as verbal.

Several priests have been beaten up and thrown out of their churches by what are called turber, organized gangs of militant Sandinist supporters. A children's parade last month was broken up by a mob and 16 older youngsters were held briefly in jail.

The government says the beatings are the spontaneous expression of a citizenry outraged by church interference in domestic affairs. Two foreign priests were expelled from Nicaragua last month for alleged antigovernment actions.

Nicaragua's archbishop, Miguel Obando y Bravo, responded in an interview with the Italian publication Stampa that the Sandinists have declared war on us. The regime has embarked on the Marxistcuinist path and sees in the church the only institution capable of stopping it." Archbishop Obando y Bravo was quoted as accusing the government of continuous human rights violations, torture and summary executions. All this, combined with recent rightist death threats against church leaders in Guatemala, prompted Pope John Paul II to ienounce "blind violence" against "a long list of priests and members of religious families" throughout Central America

In a speech in Rome on Saturday after meeting with visiting Guste-malan bishops, the pope warned: "No one should ever pretend to confuse true evangelism with sub-version. Ministers should be able to perform their mission with security and without interference in the entire country.

The church has been in the thick of controversy in El Salvador since the violence began in 1977 with the murder, reportedly by soldiers, of the Rev. Ratilio Grande, a priest who worked with the poor. Calvin Klein Pares Down The Shape of Elegance

By Hebe Docsey

International Herald Tribune NEW YORK - Calvin Klein's

ashion is becoming so minimal it is almost abstract. In his spring collection Tuesday, he showed clothes made of the lightest handkerchief linen, cut so simple and pure they had a dreamy, sleepwalking quality. Some long chemises were even cut like night-shirts. The models, some of the prettiest in town, wore flat, pale snakeskin sandals and looked as if they were. walking barefoot. At Klein's urgent request, they wore no makeup, to fluffy pre-Raphaelite hairdos. The collection was oot the casual chic, impeccably co-ordinated silk sportswear Klein is famous for. Nor did it have the glamorous hard chic he picked up a few seasons ago when he hired Marina Schiano away from Yves Saint Laurent. This was a new and different look, totally American and pareddown - the antithesis of elaborate European overdesigning. "This is a time for simple clothes," the designer said after the show.

Klein has come a long way since he started in the late 1960s, and his show, packed with everybody who is anybody in the fashion business. had a superstar quality, with Andy Warhol and Bianca Jagger center

Martha Philips, owner of Mar-tha, and a blockbuster of a merchant herself, said she was Klein's first customer and still remembered his first black coat. "Divine," was her comment, adding that Klein deserved his staggering success (his business turnover is said to be close to $1 billion nowadays) "because he always made what the public wanted." If Klein is right again, women resort look - his colors included the palest naturals, dove grays and subtle berry reds. The fresh quality also came through in the seersuck-er-like striped linen as well as in en candy stripes. Klein was at his best when he different age groups. Ironically enough, in the United States, short is worn by women of a certain age, as the French say, while long is for the young. In Europe, it is just the opposite, the young in minis while matrons cling to the elegant Chanci length. Saint Laurent also showed short skirts in his last collection, but never as, YOUR where both Bill Blass and Geoffrey Beeneshowed skirts well above the knee. After Calvin Klein's spare approach, Ann Klein, a sportswear, honse with designs by Donna Karan and Louis dell'Olio, looked almost heavy. The clothes were salable, sportswear separates without any firm direction, and hemlines were at all levels, from Bernmda shorts to mid-ankle length. Colors were pale pastels, with indiscent sequins said to be inspired by the Impressionists. The sweaters were interesting with Argyll, cableknit and angora patterns.

Geoffrey Beene, who showed at flower market downtown, was ina class all to himself. Using the finest fabrics and the most exquisite, almost fastidious workmanship, he is the closest thing in New York to a Paris conturier.

His designs are not for every-body, and while he caters to elegant and well-heeled women, his audience is more restricted than that of Blass, whose flashier concept of elegance has broad appeal.

Beene is also probably the gent-lest, most romantic of the American designers, and he appeals to women with low-key, reserved sersuality. In what is being quickly dubbed "the year of the dress" he. had several pretty offerings, including some in organdie, softly belted and full-skirted. Others were fluid. linen chemises with a deep V insel-front or back. The V was often filled in with see-through chiffon, in a variety of transparencies.

To European observers, who are used to ready-to-wear collections about daytime and sportswear, one of the most fascinating thing about. American collections is the variety of evening wear. Here, each collec-tion is split about equally between daytime and evening suggesting that this is a country where people go out a lot.

The clother cover all kinds of occasions, from country club to. prom dances. There are lots of alhome pajamas, as well as hig and Ritzy fully-sequined evening dieses es that should come in useful in New York, where a frenetic social life, including three to four majorsocial events an evening is snow balling until Christmas.

Which Arctic Explorer Really Reached the North Pole First?

By John G. Morris

DARIS - Who first reached the North Pole? Robert E. Peary in 1909 or Dr. Frederick A. Cook in

On Sept. 1, 1909, the world got the news from Cook: "REACHED NORTH POLE APRIL 21 1908." Five days after Cook's message, a cable came from Commander Peary, who had been unheard from for a year: "I HAVE THE POLE APRIL 6, 1909."

This dispute, which has sim-mered for three quarters of a contury, burst into fresh flame at a conference of polar explorers and arctic scholars held this week at France's National Center for Scientific Studies. The most extraordinary gaest speaker, who appeared in a parka and spoke in lumit, was In a parks and spoke in limit, was Iggianguaq Untaaq of Taule, Greenland. He was introduced by his friend Jean Malanrie, of the Center for Arctic Stuffes, which hosted the meeting Malanrie regards the Eskimos as the manny heroes of arctic exploration.

Wally Herbert, who headed the British expedition that crossed the pole from Alaska to Spitsbergen in 1968-69, opened the discussion of the controversy by playing tapes, from gramophone records, of the voices of the two polar adversaries:

First, Cook, the mild-mannered physician from upstate New York, whose credentials included service s surgeon of Peary's 1891-92 arene expedition and the Belgian antaro-tic expedition of 1897-99: "On April 21st, 1908, I reached the North Pole, and unfuried the Stars and Stripes. At the Pole, two days were spent to complete the observations. We were glad to get there; glad to be the first to raise the fing on the northern axis; but we found nothing very wonderful — only a shifting desert of frost, drifting with the prevailing winds; no life, no land — we were the only pulsating creatures in a dead world.

In the bitter word battle that ensued, Peary's forces over-whelmed Cook's. Peary was backed by The New York Times, the Na-tional Geographic Magazina, and the "Peary Arctic Club" of wealthy sponsors. Cook had fittle backing. Peary caught the public fancy with flamboyant statements: the splendid frozen jewel of the North. for which through centuries men of every nation have struggled, and and is to be worn forever, by the Stars and Stripest" Peary denounced Cook: "I regard Dr. Cook's action in going north 'sub rosa' . . . for the admitted purpose of forestalling me as one of which no man possessing a sense of honor would be guilty." Cook was relatively charitable tovard his accuser, but when he tried to lecture he was picketed with pamphlets that "exposed" him. He was hounded about his previous claim to have reached the peak of of Mount McKinley and about apparent discrepancies in his polar journals. When he formed a Texas company to exploit oil leases he was accused of fraud, convicted and served several years in Leaven-

In recent years revisionist historians have come to Cook's rescue, often by ronning down Peary. In 1982 the Sierra Club published "Great Exploration Hoaxes" by David Roberts, with the word "HOAX" superimposed on a jack-et photo of the Peary party. On Dec. 13 CBS is scheduled to broadcast a two-hour dramatization, featuring Rod Steiger as Peary and Richard Chamberlain as Cook Recent publicity for the show says:

no new evidence on the subject -Cook's and Peary's records having long been digested. He says that their navigational findings, photographs and other data were simply nadequate by modern standards although "a great many iconoclasts and third-rate polar historians will

Fearing that its own historical material will be misrepresented in the CBS dramatization, New York's Explorers Club asked George Michanowsky, its archives chairman, to read a statement at the conference stating that the cloh aintains strict neutrality on the Cook-Peary controversy.

By now thousands of submariners have passed under, and surfaced briefly at, the North Pole --- a regular feature of ouclear submarine shakedown cruises. Tourists may make the round trip, for about $3,000, from Alert, Northwest Territories. An insurance man from Minnesota, with three friends, made it to the pole by snowmobile in 1968. The Japanese explorer Naomi Uemura got there all alone, or rather only with dogs, 10 years lat-

Terence Armstrong, the retiring director of the Scott Polar Research Institute at Cambridge, gave his scholarly opinion with a sly twinkle: "My candidate is P.A. Gordiyenko. He told me that on April 27, 1951, as a member of a Soviet oceanographic expedition, accompanied by two of Aeroflot's best navigators, he found that he happened to stand on the North Pole.

"I rather think he made it."

With the permission of the Nigerian government, the wasps and beetles are being used to attack the cassava mealyhug, according to Ermond Hartmans, director of the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture at Ibadan, Nigeria. For 700 million people throughout the world, the root called cassava -also known as manioc - is an important food. Americans know it best as the source of tapioca.

Mr. Harimans said the mealybug was taken from Latin America to Africa in 1972 and 1973 and now has infected most African cassavagrowing areas in 26 countries. It spread rapidly because it has no natural memies in Africa, he said. The loss from the mealybug is estimated at $1.8 billion to $2 billion a year, and the price of cassava in Nigeria has

New Option on Intestinal Surgery

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI)—Seven years ago, Robert Rhoads, a Montana electrical engineer, was told he suffered from a rare genetic disease of the colon that was bound to turn cancerous.

His only option was to bave the colon removed. This surgeons did, aving only about eight inebes in. But the disease returned, leaving Mr. Rhoads with an alternative he was not sure he could endure. Like 2 million other persons in the United States, he would have to undergo a permanent ileostomy — in which part of his small intestine would be pulled out through an incision in his abdomen and attached to a disposable sac to serve as an outlet for digestive wastes.

But late last year, Mr. Rhoads met Dr. James Becker of the University of Utah Medical Center, who performs on adults a new alternative to lieostomy and a similar operation, colostomy, in which the colon is pulled through the abdomen. The complex, tedious procedure — performed at only a handful of academic centers in the United States — is called total colectomy, mucosal protectomy, endorectal ileoanal pullthrough with temporary loop ileostomy. All those who have already had ileostomies and colostomies, those suffering ulcerative colitis and those with certain inherited diseases, would be candidates for the new operation provided their condition has not turned cancerous, according to Dr. Becker.

Less than four months after Dr. Becker's 61/2-hour alternative operation — "which caused much less pain than I had anticipated" — Mr. Rhoads, 39, is back to a oormal diet, working full time, riding his hike, fishing and

As AT&T Breakup Approaches, Stock Approved Of Bell Canada Is Gaining on NYSE By Brazil

N EW YORK — While tremendous investor attention has focused on the Jan. I target date for the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., shares of another telephone company, based north of the U.S. border, have been climbing steadily on the New York Stock

It is Bell Canada Enterprises, which provides 61 percent of Canada's telephone service and most of that country's telephone equipment. On Wednesday, its shares rose 25 cents to a record of $25. In 1982, the stock sold at $13.25, after an extended period of lackinster performance.

In recent years, the stock has been somewhat depressed, partly reflecting the downturn in Canada's economy. But Bell Canada's profits have been rising lately.

On a fully diluted basis, the company earned $2.45 a share last year and $2.45 a share in 1981. Miss Proga estimates that profits will reach $2.75 a share in 1983 and about $3.15 a share next year. She also pointed out that the company's reorganization last April as a holding company was a significant event in its evolution. This reorganization was effected to separate regulated businesses from nonregulated activities.

Value Line envisages Bell Canada's manufacturing subsidiary, Northern Telecom Ltd., as an increasingly important contributor to earnings. Bell Canada owns 53 percent of Northern Telecom, which ranks as the largest manufacturer of telecommunications equipment in Canada and the second biggest in North America, trailing only the Western Electric unit of AT&T.

"Northern Telecom's United States control in the stock has been somewhat depressed, partly reflections here said passage of the compromise neasure, which limits overall salary increases to 87 percent of obstacle to formal IMF approval for an $11-billion package of new loans and credits for Brazil later this month.

unit of AT&T.

"Northern Telecom's United States operations are booming," Value Line noted. "In particular, demand for the company's Digital Multiplex System central office switches continues to be exceptionally strong. Northern Telecom has a long-term contract to provide DMS switching equipment to AT&T and inany of the Bell operating companies are likely to turn to this manufacturer for their central office switches, too. Meanwhile, Bell Canada's telephone operations probably will show the Canadian economy sets back on track." improvement as the Canadian economy gets back on track

There is, however, one slight caveat, according to the advisory service. "United States citizens should not ignore the 7-percent depreciation of the Canadian dollar we expect by 1986-88," Value Line said. "In our view," Manili Lynch said recently, "Northern Telecom is a prime beneficiary of AT&T's divestiture of its local operating companies." This breakup will result in eight corporations — a simmed-down version of the current AT&T, and severa regional holding companies that will provide local telephone service and several new activities.

Votes Clears Way For Action by IMF

By Jackson Diehl

BRASILIA — Brazil's National congress cleared the way Wednesday for implementation of a new international financial rescue plan for payment of the country's 590-billion foreign debt by approving an austerity package curbing wage reflecting the downturn

> The congressional vote, taken af-ter a 10-hour debate, represented a key political victory for the governent in its bid to introduce antiinflation measures required by the International Monetary Fund and foreign banks, tional Congress, or the govern-ment's own party leadership.

The impasse led President João Baptista Figueiredo to declare a state of emergency in Brasilia last month. The deadlock was resolved only when the government made significant concessions to congressional party leaders, winning the support of a small opposition par-

The measure's final passage by a five-vote margin in the oppositioncontrolled Chamber of Deputies was described by officials as a watershed in the military government's struggle to carry out unpopular economic measures while maintaining its political liberalization and move toward democracy.

"I feel there was a great expecta-tion outside to see if the Brazilian administration would get the politi-cal support," said the finance min-ister, Emane Galveas. "This wage bill has served to consolidate and unite the official parties. It is a show of political will."

While mounting political tension that it is spinning off.

have finally won one (fight)," ob-served one diplomat. "They made the necessary compromises to avoid disaster."

The new wage law was the fifth proposed by the government this year to modify a wage indexation system created in 1979. That prograin mandated a scale of semianmual salary increases that gave low-wage earners increases higher than the rate of inflation while keeping salary increases as a whole equal to the inflation rate.

Under pressure from the IMF, the government decreed new wage laws seeking to limit increases to 80 percent of inflation, which is expected to top 200 percent this year.

The laws were subject to subsequent approval by the National Congress, however, which gained an opposition majority in its lower house following open state and lo-cal electic s last year.

The congression of wage decrees in September and last they see a "breakthrough" in deadmonth were the first such vetoes of government policies in 19 years of military rule. Another wage plan was then backed late last month by the leadership of the government's Social Democratic Party (PDS).

The government finally won support for the change by agreeing to mandate increases equal to 100 percent of inflation for workers who make less than $200 a month, or 67 percent of the salaried labor foce. A sliding scale also softened the impact on middle-class incomes from the last plan opposed by the PDS party.

Political observers here predicted that the government may offer a cabinet appointment to the small Brazilian Workers' Party next year in exchange for its congressional support, which provided the votes needed for a majority.

The austerity program is still strongly opposed, however, by the major Brazilian opposition parties, including the Brazilian Democratic Movement (PMDB), which favors a "negotiated moratorium" on debt payments. .

Eurocheque Cards Go Electronic

Banks' Plan to Link Machines Will Aid Travelers

By Paul Lewis

New York Times Service LISBON - Hundreds of European banks will start linking their automatic cash dispenser systems next summer in a move that will eventually enable travelers carrying small blue plastic cards marked Eurocheque to draw cash from money machines 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in more than 20 countries.

Already, the plastic card is being used by Eurocheque's 26 million card holders to guarantee personal checks in any of the organization's 19 member countries, including Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union. Under the new system, in addition to guarantee ing personal checks, the card will combine the functions of a cash dispenser card and credit card.

The new system, announced at a meeting in Lisbon in October to coincide with Eurocheque's 15th anniversary, represents a new effort by the powerful group of European banks to retain a dominant position in the provision of financial services to its customers. Specifically, the banks say, they want to pre-empt the field before any proliferation of nonbank credit cards and other payment and financial devices can take place, as has happened in the United States.

"American banks didn't see the problem early enough," said Ulrich Weiss, Eurocheque president, who is a director of West Germany's Deutsche Bank. "They allowed self-governing payment sys-tems to develop. Now they regret they didn't act together like us." Unless we can keep the sale of financial services within banks and away from conbanks, we won't have enough business to sustain so many branches," said Eckart van Hooven, another Deut-sche Bank director, who was credited with inventing the Eurocheque payments system.

The Eurocheque move also represents an advance in its attempt in cut through the tangle of different currencies, exchange rates and bank opening hours that can make Europe a nightmare for travelers who must constantly change money as they go from country to country. Indeed, officials say, regular visitors to Europe, or who are moving there, could oow find it useful to open an account with a bank in the Eurocheque system and draw a

BP Says Tender Sale in Forties Field Will Yield a Total of $432.9 Million

LONDON (Reuters) — British Petroleum Co. PLC said it will receive £292.5 million ($432.9 million) from the sale by tender of 39 units of 0.25 percent states in the North Sea Forties Field.

BP said tenders from 19 companies were successful and each unit will be sold at £7.5 million. Minimum tender price for the sale was £5.3

The sales, subject to energy department approval, exclude BP's interests in the Forties pipeline or associated onshore facilities.

As well as the sales by tender, BP recently agreed to sell separate 0.95 percent interests in the field to both OK Exploration (U.K.) Ltd. and Trafalgar House Oil & Gas Ltd., a Trafalgar House subsidiary. Completion of all these sales will reduce BP's stake in the Forties Field to 83.13 percent, but BP will remain operator of the field.

KTZ Bids for British Electric Oilfields

LONDON (Reuters) - RTZ Oil & Gas Ltd. has offered assets valued at about £60 million ($89. i million) to British Electric Traction Co. for all its interests in 14 North Sea blocks, including its 5-percent stake in the Maureen field, British Electric said Wednesday.

The company said it referred the offer to its North Sea partners, which have the opportunity to acquire the interests on equivalent terms. This means that final details of the proposed sale, which is subject to other conserning including Energy Department approval, will not be known before late December.

The approximate £60 million value of the offer includes British Electric's share of production profits up to the end of this year.

Ruling Against Michelin Is Upheld BRUSSELS (Renters) — The European Court of Justice upheld on Thursday a European Commission ruling that Michelin, the French tire animulacturer; was guilty of unfair trade practices. The panel, however, reduced a fine imposed on the company two years ago.

The company, which has 60 percent of the Dutch market for heavy tires, was fined for operating a "loyalty-discount" system that restricted competition by dissuading dealers from buying from rival European Michelin's appeal to the court led to a reduction in the fine to $250,000 from the original $575,000. The court also reversed two related commission rulings. The first accessed the company of discrimination in provision of services, while the second criticized the company for offering discounts

Democrats in U.S. Offer 2 Industrial Strategies

By Peter Behr Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - The Senate Democratic Caucus has endorsed an economic strategy that would seek to strengthen the competitiveagreements among management, labor and the government.

A comparable plan, backed by the Democratic majority of the House Banking Committee's subcommittee on economic stabilizasion, was also issued Tuesday.

Both proposals for ministrial policies represent attempts by Democratic legislators to outline a new response to the administration's economic policies for the 1984 presidential campaign.

The Senate proposal, drafted by a group headed by Senator Edward. M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massa-chusetts, would establish a presidential advisory council of leaders from business, labor and the government. The panel would formu-late a national industrial strategy to deal both with older, basic industries and new, high-technology ven-tures that are threatened by foreign

Mr. LaFalce was asked whether such a council might have opposed U.S. Steel Corp.'s 1982 purchase of

Sears to Spend $1.7 Billion on Store Modernization, Building By Isadore Barmash New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- Sears, Roebuck & Co., in a major move to improve its competitive position, has announced that it will invest $1.7 billion over the next five years to modernize more than 600 of its existing stores and open 62 new ones to compete more strongly with department stores.

Sears, the largest U.S. retailer, said Tuesday that the program was the most ambitious in its history. Edward R. Telling, the chairman new "store-of-the-future" program chairman and chief executive offi-

U.S. Bill to Curb Petrochemical Imports Faces Delay

By Stuart Anerbach

Washington Part Service WASHINGTON - Discussion of such arcane trade concepts as "upstream subsidies" and "targeting" have split the American petrochemical industry and raised fears of new protectionist legislation in capitals as far away as Tokyo and Mexico City.

The battle has involved major Industries seeking import relief forces in U.S. trade law, including Charls E. Walker's economic lobministration. It has also tarnished the free-trade reputation of Repre-sentative Sam M. Gibbons, the Florida Democrat who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee's trade subcommittee

Mr. Dingell last week steered a bill through the House a bill that would require certain amounts of American labor and parts to be used in cars sold in the United States. He did so in spite of the strong objections of Mr. Gibbons. The most controversial element of Mr. Gibbons' proposal is aimed at embing imports of low-cost co-ment and ammonia from Mexico by defining as an unfair trade practice "upstream subsidies."

The law would apply to Mexico's imports Mexican ammonia, argued

DELCORSO'S GALLERY

By Philip Caputo. 352 pp. $15.95 Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 521 Fifth Avemue, New York, N.Y. 10175.

Reviewed by Howard Chapnick

I T is impossible these days to pick up a daily newspaper, read a weekly newsmagazine or turn on the television news without being inundated with words and pictures about the development of a new war, a new massacre, a new political assassination. War, violence, poverty and misery are journalism's seductive wife, mistress, handmaiden and concubine.

Simultaneously with the march of these events, images of bloodbaths, slaughter and gore are transmitted in living color via satellite into living rooms. This is what journalists call "bang-bang," their argot for real blood-and-guts battlefield action.

"Bang-bang" is at the very heart of Philip Caputo's "DelCorso's Gallery", a grapping, 12alistic, accurate, disturbing and compas novel about war photographers that begins in Vietnam and ends in Lebanon. Caputo's visual writing style vividly evokes the sounds, sights and smells of war: "The air above him was full of hisses, shricks, and moans; if he didn't know where he was, he would have thought he'd landed in an asylum for demented birds. He looked at the soldier's upper right arm, meat and bone blown out of it, severed blood vessels like the wires of a radio that had been smashed

Goya couldn't have painted this scene better, the photographers Don McCullin and the legendary W. Eugene Smith couldn't have photographed it in greater detail or starker horror. Certainly author Caputo knows his subject. He's been to war, first as a Marine infantry officer in the jungles of Vietnam in 1965, later as a correspondent to witness the United Sta-tes's humiliating departure "with honor" from Vietnam in 1975. He also knows Beirut from his experiences as a newspaper correspondent during the 1976 civil war.

But "DelCorso's Gallery" is not just a book about war. Like most of us, Caputo sees war as senseless, irrational, repulsive and maniacal What makes his novel s different and important work is that it focuses on some of the philosophic questions of journalistic practice and the public's right to know. Should that right he accomplished at the risk of life and hmb of newspaper reporters, television cameramen, and newspaper and magazine journal-ists? Do totally uninformative "baug-bang" stories satisfy a jaded public's appetite for vicarious bloodshed? Do television and print media editors and picture editors cater to the public's desire for titillation through violence pushing their field men to take greater chances than reason dictates? Has contemporary journalism spawned a school of "pornograp violence" pandering to public demand for shock and sensation?

To present these questions, Caputo chooses three protagonists — the free-lance photogra-phers Nicholas DelCorso, P.K. Dunlop and Harry Bolton, DelCorso, an idealistic photojournalist, believes his pictures of war's innocent victims will lead to the eradication of all war. Dunlop is the aging Pulitzer Prize-win-ning king of the hill whose photographs glorify war and warriors, whose pictures emphasize the heroic qualities that underlie "loyalty to country, courage, the nobility of sacrifice. durance in the face of overwhelming odds." Bolton is the cynical, tough, wise-cracking heart-of-gold veteran of many journalistic campaigns.

Against the backdrops of Vietnam and Beirut, Caputo describes a competitive feud he. tween Dunlop and DelCorso replete with dirty tricks and physical confrontation. In my expe nence this is one of two false notes in and otherwise believable narrative. In the small family of photojournalism there is rugged com petition, yes, but the degree of bitterness and hatred between these two antagonistic compet. I itors stretches credibility.

The other false note concerns DelCorso's wife, Margaret, who would prefer that Nick give up chasing wars and make the big bucks 1 1 associated with commercial photography. puto's point is valid — that photojournalism in its covering the hot spots of the world, is not easily compatible with marriage. But Margaret is a cardboard character whose every appear ance in the novel precipitates an angry discussion about what compels Nick to forsake the good life for the risks of conflict. She never does get the point.

These minor criticisms notwithstanding, ev. erything else in "DelCorso's Gallery" hits the mark. Caputo has ably penetrated the psyches mark. Caputo has any penetrated the pythes of the photograph history as it is made. Them a brotherhood which comes together in North. em Ireland, Honduras, Nicaragna, Vietnam Beirut, Chad, Poland and a litary of other remote places that become "hot spots."

Looking into these individual minds is not so simple. Some take the risks in search of instant fame and fortune; some out of a sense of adventure and love of the camaraderic born of shared dangers; some are "action junkies who have to be where the action is to satisfy their addictive need for violence and danger and some are there because not to be there is to abdicate their sense of mission to educate through their photographs a public often indifferent to faraway suffering.

If DelCorso is indeed Philip Caputo's philo sophical spokesman, then Caputo is saying that the risks borne by journalists to tell the story of our troubled planet are well worth. candle. Others agree. Lord Snowden that "war pictures have got to come back be published to help prevent other atrocities that kind happening."

Cornell Capa, the keeper of his brother Robert's flame and legend (photojournalist Robert Capa died covering the Indochina fighting in May 1954), has said that "war photographs have the power to affect. With all the arguments and discussions about the Vietnam war, what did the visual image do? It ended the war.

Never mind that it did it by choking you, by making you so sensitized that you threw up; your hands and shrieked, 'Enough! I don't want any more!' When it became too much, the war stopped. Johnson couldn't go on any more The nation had too much of it. Thank you Lovely. It worked."

Philip Caputo has written a tough, painful and provocative book that will cause introsper tion in the journalistic community. It is also: haunting narrative of one man's ill-fated ren dezvous with destiny in war's "daily concert of World Boxing Association junior It is a long long time from June middleweight title and setting up to November. On June 20, 1980, the fight with Hagier.

After beating Moore, Duran said, "I was born again." Two months ago, Duran was sit-ting with Lois Spada, his Argen-tine-born manager, watching the world Boxing Council welter-undervard of the Larry Holmes-Scott Friedly 1882. Scott Frank bout on television. Kirkland Laing, a Jamaican welter-weight of no distinction or ability, was pummeled and eventually.

knocked out by Fred Hutchings. "I can't imagine how this guy could have beaten you," said

On Sept. 4, 1982, Duran's career hit bottom when he lost a 10-round decision to Lsing. He was dis-graced, washed up, abandoned. ada became his manager after that fight.

Now, watching Lsing again; Duran could only shake his head and say, "I was not in shape."

That's an old story. Duran told Spada there'd been so much switching of dates, sites and oppo-nents for the Laing fight that he'd stopped training and gone back to overeating and drinking.

"Whisky," said Spade.

Duran's career peaked. Recognized as one of the greatest 135-pounders in history, he had been lightweight weight champion. He was a national hero in Panama. Wined, dined and stuffed, he had to lose 38 pounds and was in no shape to meet Leonard again Nov. 25, 1980. Panamanians stoned his house and made obscene phone calls to his mother.

"Just for one fight, they turn their backs on me," Duran said. "After that, I don't care."

After the Lsing fight, Spada, who earlier had worked with Duran and later remained loyal, corbed the fighter's appetite. Last June 16, snarling and angry, Duran knocked out Moore and became a champion

It is now November again, and Duran, 32, has not looked sharp since arriving here last week from his training camp. He is in shape; no problems with weight. On Oct. 7, he was down to the 160-pound limit, well on his way to the 157 or 158 Spada wanted.

. This time, from June to November, Duran worked. He was allowed a brief vacation, but his weight never reached 170, said Spada, and be has been training for 12 weeks. Perhaps he worked too hard, sparring about 240 rounds. He has been sluggish and unin-

"Maybe it is because I have worked so hard and 1 am tired," Duran said the other day. "But you can be sure the day of the fight I will not be tired." Duran was asked if he hated Hagler. "Why?" he replied, seemingly puzzled.

This is the man who, in winning the lightweight title 12 years ago, punched Ken Buchanan. He once knocked out a man in the first round, and when the man's wife charged crazily into the ring, be knocked her out; too.

After he had put Ray Lampkin in a hospital, he snarled: "It's a good thing for him I was sick or they'd be taking him to a morgue." beat him to the punch, tie him up. retirement and the glory could the New York Toman/Took Kannady Before he fought Leonard the first And he's got to watch out for that come if he lost proudly.

time, he frequently uttered one of the few English expressions he has mastered: "I will kill him."

The anger was replaced by depression after the second Leonard light, but he managed to translate it back to anger before Moore, And with the adulation he has since recrived in this country and Panama, where is the anger now? "A good question," said Spada.

answer. Pride, the manager finally said, has replaced anger as a motivating force. "In this case," he said, "the most important thing for him is to win the fourth championship. There are many people who say he is one of maybe the five best fighters in history. He thinks if be wins this fight, nobody will have any doubt he will

It took him a while to think of an

But pride does not seem to have lit the old fires.

There is another side to Duran's rebirth, one that may account for the better than 3-to-1 odds against him. His comeback was fashioned basically with two victories this year: a fourth-round knockout of Pipino Cuevas and the triumph over Moore. But at the time Cuevas was finished as a fighter, and Moore, while a world champion, had had only 12 pro fights. Hagler, on the other hand, has been fighting professionally since 1973 and has not lost in seven and a half years against the best 160-pounders of at least two generations. Duran does have a chance of winning. He is in shape and seem-ingly confident. If he has overed, a couple of days off could be the simple cure. There is no question who has the quicker hands; Hagler will he hit.

"Til tell you one thing," said Par Petronelli, one of Hagler's managers. "This is the first opponent in a long time who is not afraid of him.

It will not have a fifth to look the first opponent in a long time who is not afraid of him. Duran's not afraid to look Marvin in the eyes."

Duran, "that shouldn't even be brought up. In a sense, it's like a last hurrah for Duran, a chance to redeem himself." Hagler is hoping Duran gets a

It will not happen if Duran wins, said Spada, "Roberto likes boxing

O'Brien Quits as NBA Chief

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatche

NEW YORK — Larry O'Brien resigned Wednesday as commis-sioner of the National Basketball Association as of Feb. 1, 1984, when his contract expires. He told a news conference that he had rejected a contract offered by a four-member owners' committee; it would have run through the 1984-85 season.

O'Brien said he had "the feeling of being on a merry-go-round. You don't want to hall yourself into continuity. There should be an end and this is the end. I have a need for new challenges." O'Brien, 66, succeeded the late Walter Kennedy as commissioner in June 1975. The following year, the NBA ended its expensive war with the American Basketball Association by merging with the younger league, absorbing four of its franchises. The NBA grew to its present 23 teams when it added a Dallas franchise in 1980.

During O'Brien's tenure, leaguewide gate receipts doubled and revenues from television networks increased 300 percent. At the start of this season, he helped usher in the most ambitious drug-enforcement program in U.S. professional sports. His departure comes amid a labor dispute between the league and its referees.

Before 1975, O'Brico was highly active in politics. He was a close advisor to John F. Keinedy during the 1960 presidential campaign and was subsequently named postmaster general. He was an aide to President Lyndon Johnson, was chairman of the Democratic National Committee from 1970-72 and directed Senator George McGovern's unsuccessful presidential campaign in 1972.

ART BUCHWALD

Candidates and the Press

WASHINGTON — The Newspaper Guild has endorsed Fritz Mondale as its presidential candidate. Actually, the leaders of the Newspaper Guild endorsed him — the membership was not consulted. Many members of the guild are very angry that their leaders took a position in the presidential campaign.

I thought there would be jubilation in the Mondale camp when the Newspaper Guild gave the nod to their man. But it was just the oppo-

"This is an absolute disaster," said one of Mondale's peonle, "We've been blindsided."

"How can you say that? The Newspaper erful union and its members control much of the news fit to

"I didn't think of that. You don't believe they would purposely slant their stories against him, just to assert their independence?"

They could do something worse ignore him. And if they do write about him they'll he harder on Mondale than anybody else. If they are not, their editors will think they're following the Newspaper Guild party line."

Ancient Beijing Site Found

United Press Intern BEIJING - The China Daily newspaper said Wednesday that archaeologists have found ancient Beijing, once known as Ji, 42 miles (70 kilometers) southwest of the present city center, Evidence was found beneath the town of Liulihe, the newspaper said, including tombs, wells, chariots, weapons, skeletons of horses and the outlines of what were believed to be the original city walls.

"I think you're right," I said. "I frankly don't believe a Newspaper Guild should support any presi-dential candidate. After all, what can a president do for the press, anyway? The worst candidates have given us our best stories, and the best ones haven't given us any stories at all. Why do you think the guild officers stuck their necks

The Mondale man said, "We suspect someone from the other side was behind it."

"When you say the other side are you talking about Mondale's Democratic rivals or the Republicans?" "In a presidential primary everybody is on the other side."

"Perhaps you're overreacting." The Mondale aide said, "The last time the Newspaper Guild supported a presidential candidate was 1972 when they came out for McGovern. Look what happened

"I forgot McGovern. Funny enough, after they endorsed him, McGovern complained he never got a decent story in the papers

"It isn't funny. The same thing could happen to Mondale."

"I guess your best bet would he to repudiate the guild endorsement. After all, you don't have to take every political blessing that comes

"It may he too late. We should have turned it down when it was first offered to us. Now it's going to hard to get the rank-and-file guild members to stop leaning over backwards to show they don't support Fritz."

"I notice where many guild members have already notified their leaders that they don't sup-port Mondale. Isn't this a good sign?" I asked.

Yeh, but those reporters will go even farther out of their way to show they mean it. No matter which way they go now, it's a nowin situation for us."

There must he some way you can get a fair shake from the newspaper people, in spite of the fact y endorsed you "Any ideas?

How about this one? Why doesn't Mondale announce 'If I am elected president, I will let the press

Coma: Howa Family Endured Son 13-Year Living Death

By Penelope As Afillari

Les Angeles Times Service

SAN LUIS OBISPO California — After 13 years a was over. Robert Cleath Jr., a once vibrant, talented young man who had lived in a coma since a 1970 car accident, was dead at age 31.

His family gathered at a grave site here on a brilliantly sunny fall day. There was no formal service. Those who had been his friends had long since drifted away, and as his mother, Virginia, sadly put it, "Anybody who wanted to see him had I3 years to do it."

A sweet-faced, sensitive womzan, she stood next to her husband, Robert Cleath Sr., a burly, white-haired, retired college professor who had been ordained as a Presbyterian minister five years after the accident.

Their remaining children were present: April Cleath, a registered nurse, 29; Carolyn Thom, a 33year old housewife married to a cardiologist; and Timothy, 30, who had been driving the car when the accident occurred. He is now a geologist.

Rob Cleath never regained consciousness. Fed through a tuhe inserted in his nose, he passed the years without speaking or moving. Statistics are not kept on the numbers in this condition in the United States, but a rough estimate by an epidemiologist who has studied the problem is that about 1,600 Americans currently lie in vegetative comas.

They had all emerged, they said, closer to each other, and with a greater religious faith. The elder Cleath, described by his surviving children as stalwart and pragmatic, now felt he had more empathy and tendrness for people who came to him for counseling.

During these years, however, he had not only become a minister, but after the accident, to help pay medical bills on his teacher's salary, he had started building apartments and homes. This, over time, made him prosperous.

April became a nurse largely out of compassion for her brother's plight. Timothy chose to live and work within driving distance of San Luis Obispo, refusing even to consider professional opportunities farther away so that he could "be available" to his brother. For the same reason, Carolyn persuaded her husband to move to Arroyo Grande, in the San Luis Obispo area, once his medical training was completed about a

The three would say they knew the chances of Rob ever coming out of his vegetative state were slim. But even after 13 years, their ties were strong. April, who lives in Los Angeles, recently bought a bouse in San Luis Obispo, planning to move back so she could see Rob more often at the convalescent hospital, where she felt he was "so alone." Now, she said, "I have a bouse I don't need."

Tim visited Rob monthly with a group from his church in Monterey Park, taking him out of the convalescent home, exercising his arms and legs, singing to him and praying.

Sometimes, their mother noted, she used to think of Rob as "a Rip Van Winkle," and would imagine him waking up. She wondered what differences he would notice, in the world and in the family. December, 1970, was a happy time for the Cleath family. Carolyn, Rob and Tim were students Wheaton College in Illinois. Carolyn in her senior year, was bringing ber boyfriend, Peter

Thom, whom she would eventually marry, home to meet her parents over Christmas vacation. She was flying, but Rob and Tim, who were in their second and first years, respectively, decided to hitchhike home, partly from a sense of adventure and partly to save money

Robert Cleath, a professor of speech communication at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, and Virginia, a local kindergarten teacher who once had been the teacher on television's "Romper Room," drove to Los Angeles to pick up Carolyn and Peter at Los Angeles Inter-naional Airport. The boys were to meet them there. The plane was due at noon on Sunday, Dec. 13. "When we got to LAX, an announcement came on asking me to call the operator," Cleath said. "That's when we learned the boys were in dire condition in this little hospital in The boys had picked up a ride in Missouri and drove across country taking turns at the wheel with the car's owner. Tim still does not remember much about what happened, but that morning, while he was driving, the car went off the road about 60 miles west of Needles. Rob and the car owner were thrown from the car and left unconscious, and the owner died four days later. Tim suffered a concussion and a sepa-

The Cleaths left Carolyn in Los Angeles and drove to Needles. While Tim recovered at a hospital in Thousand Oaks, Rob was transferred to the University of California at Los Angeles Medi-

Rob was, his father said, the "spark plug" of the family, a bright, active extrovert who stood out in a crowd. In high school, he had been active in dramatics, and had landed the part of Henry Hig-gins in Shaw's "Pygmalion" in his senior year.

"He would put his head back and just laugh," Virginia said. "I can bear it in my head." At college he majored in speech

The parents: Virginia and Robert Cleath Sr.

But Tim said Rob was still ing about $8,000 themselves in rching" for what he wanted to be, and thought he was considering the ministry.

After the accident Rob spent a week under the care of UCLA: neurologists, and then six months at a hospital in San Luis Obispo. There were operations, tests, medications, but no change in his condition. Then, the Cleaths took him home to their white frame house on Oceanaire Drive by Lagnna Lake,

"We wanted to try everything possible to arouse him," Cleath recalled recently. "I tried different types of earphones, all types of auditory stimuli, exercises, you name it.

It was probably the hardest time, said Virginia, who developed callouses on her knees from praying so often. "When we took home, we thought, when he's in his own house, and we do these exercises, we'll see some change," she said. But in the 10 months before they placed Rob in a convalescent care center, nothing

Looking back on the family's adjustment to Rob's condition, Tim sees it "in stages. The imital stage of extreme anguish and uncertainty. You're with him 24 hours a day. It's very emotional, very draining. Then, you've got to adjust to the fact you're in for the long hanl, where you don't lose hope and you don't forget him. You don't leave him."

In the early months, the Cleaths' medical bills mounted as communications, as if to follow in their $50,000 insurance policy ran his father's footsteps as a teacher. Out, The couple remembers pay-the first several months. Over the years, Social Security and Medi-Cal payments bore most of the estimated $1,000-per-month cost of extended care. The Cleaths paid about $187 per month for their share of the care after Medi-Cal and Social Security took over. They all grappled with the "why" of it, and Cleath saw the ordeal as a time of testing. "If you live by faith these testings are a part of a process we go through which develops spiritual muscle," Cleath said.

He was ordained in 1975, move he says was unrelated to his son's ordeal. He took early retirement from Cal Poly and now is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Templeton, California. Rob had periodically been ill over the last 13 years with pneumonia or various infections, but his death caught the family by surprise. Cleath had returned from a preaching assignment in Canada on a Friday. "Virginia had been to the hospital," he said. But she called me when I arrived home and said his condition was stable. He would have periodic problems, but again and again he would bounce back." Rob died the next day, of an infection resulting from urinary blockage. At the house the couple has a copper butterfly sculpture that Virginia treasures. She thinks of Rob as a butterfly, she said, "Now he's free, He's been in a cocoon, and now he's free and She started to cay. "That's what

Some see it simply as handsome design. For us it is also a guarantee of water-resistance

Note the four claws on this new Omega Constellation! They press the sapphire crystal against the case to assure the match

This novel way of making a watch water-resistant might have passed total unnoticed had it not produced such a stunning combination of elegance and sportiness, of discretion and originality, of tradition and importation. This recent Omega Constellation is a quartz chronometer with an office performance certificate. It is available in gold, gold and stamless size, and stainless steel. For men and women. New boldness in the art of watch design—for those fascinated by function
